THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

Senator Platt's Position in That Body.

(Washington Letter in N.Y. Independent.)

The Fifty-third congress has gone home, where a large part of it will stay—unwonted, unthought and unimagined behind it the last echo of wasted hours, undignified proceedings, unwise legislation in words, which in deeds was no legislation at all. The house is a big, turbulent body, reckless in its squander of time and opportunity, and fairly reveling in the risk of never doing till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day. So much is this its line of statesmanship, that no great things are expected of these unruly, never-amenable to discipline, three and a half hundred national schoolboys. On the contrary, one would be surprised if they did anything else, but keep right on with the performance up to the last minute reached by the fourth of March clock, which, in its own unique way, holds back the hands of Time himself.

But when the senate loses its head, descends to even a more reckless waste of time, in personal quarrels and exchange of epithets, and skates on this ice up to the last hour of the session, throwing to the winds that dignity and decorum which is the people's hope and pride—then, what is to be said of the United States senate? This was the spectacle presented during the last days, reaching its climax, when the vice president's patience and gavel gave out at the same time, and the Sergeant at Arms came to his relief, by reading the riot act, so to speak, to both sides of the chamber. When an English visitor at my side in the gallery said, in a tone of unmistakable meaning and with an interrogation point at the end of it, "How very extraordinary?" I replied, coolly, "Oh, no—quite common-place, after one has seen the British house of lords in session with their heads and hands and their feet on the benches, or the French chamber of deputies come to blows over the lie given in debate." At the same time, in spite of outwardly bracing up to the patriotic duty of defending my countrymen, inwardly there was the sense of shame and mortification, and a curious weakness, as if the prop had gone down somewhere, and pride been given a fall, as never before.

After all this, what is to be said of the United States senate? Well, a good deal, perhaps, on the one hand, something of the "young blood" with its new force of restless energies, brains and experience, lessening for a while, at least, the hitherto wide differences of personnel in the two houses; and, on the other hand, more may be said of the others—the calm, strong, dignified men of the senate, who, long after the all changes, are still its wisdom, its life and its backbone. So that while the "good looking young senators" throw around the senate a certain sprygeness of the smart set and ferment the atmosphere with the uneasy vigor of spontaneous speechmaking, there is much to be thankful for in the fact that the rest are the great majority, and constitute by far the largest element.

Among the safe, strong men, Senator Platt of Connecticut stands out with conspicuous ability, his splendid record second to none in the senate. A native son of the state he so ably represents, Mr. Platt has the ripe experience acquired by long and faithful public service which dates back thirty-five years beginning as secretary of state and followed by several years in the legislature, partly in the senate and partly in the house, where he served as speaker. When, long after he was elected to the United States senate the state of Connecticut greatly honored himself and the state at large by the choice of a man of brains and integrity, and who was at once so well equipped for the duties of this position.

Senator Platt holds a ready pen, and is a wise, clear cut, forcible speaker. He writes with the good style of simplicity, conciseness and easy grace of language, which gives to the reader a direct understanding and enjoyment of the subject. This is very marked in a recent article in the February North American Review, entitled "Problems in the Indian Territory." Though the Indian may be termed a thoroughly well worn topic, Senator Platt tells the story so clearly and tersely, that it is in itself an admirable solution of the Indian question.

It may be said of Senator Platt that nothing escapes his attention. He is one of the most alert and faithful to duty, and so well posted that he is ready at any moment to put in his own, whatever measure may be up for action or debate. Senator Platt is not given to long, set speeches, seldom or never preparing those elaborate efforts which "spread on the record" to be mailed to constituents. But he is a remarkably ready speaker, with an dourish, extemporaneous and vigorous, and in plain, simple English going straight to the point. He is one of the most American of Americans, and, on questions of foreign policy affecting the interests and honor of the United States, one knows where to find him. When Germany showed her hand against the importation of American meats to the home country, the backed down in a proposition to repeal the sugar duty, and the senate finance committee reported the amendment favorably. Senator Platt's position was promptly defined, and in no uncertain terms. He made a point of order against the amendment as general legislation of an appropriation bill, and charged this kind of legislation as "vicious and utterly indefensible." Senators, he said, were called upon to vote on a matter of such gravity and importance without ever having known that any such legislation was proposed, without having seen the bill, which had been printed only this morning, and without being advised that any change was to be made in the law for the inspection of cattle and meats for foreign exportation. In concluding his remarks Senator Platt said:

"Within the last year or two a foreign nation has undertaken to retaliate on the United States for some action of its congress by barring out our meats. I do not propose to engage in the repeal of any act now existing, or in the amendment of a foreign government. If Germany wants to retaliate it is a game that two can play at. And the way to convince her that her proposed retaliation is properly understood in this country is to make use of the power which we now have for retaliating on Germany. I have very little respect for the legislation

THE BROWNIES THIS WEEK.

Mr. Bunnell's Big Treat for the Public at the Hyperion.

All week at the Hyperion, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, "Palmer Cox's Brownies," on the same scale of magnificent splendor that dazzled all New York for months, will be presented. This will furnish the people of Connecticut the only opportunity of witnessing a spectacular exhibit that is conceded to be the greatest ever put upon any stage. The management, C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger, have contracted to present it in the largest cities for the next two years to come, so that all who intend to see "The Brownies" should secure their seats early, so that no disappointments may ensue. In Boston, Philadelphia and New York hundreds were turned away at the final performances, unable to gain admittance. Notwithstanding the expense attending the production, the great seating capacity of the Hyperion makes it possible for Manager Bunnell to retain the scale of $1 only for the best seats, which are third less than the New York rates for "The Brownies." There will be positively no free list.

The sale of seats is now open.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY.

Titanis, Queen of the Fairies, is betrothed to Prince Florimel, adopted son of Stanislaus, King of the Brownies band. The wedding is to be celebrated on the eve of May, and the Brownies have come to fairland to take part in the general jubilation. Dragonfel, a wicked demon, and his retinue, come to the wedding, bearing gifts and disguised as friends and well wishers. While the Prince and Queen with song and dance, an alarm comes from within the palace that Titanis and her ladies in waiting have been seized and carried away by Dragonfel, who seeks to prevent the power for good which would result in an alliance of Brownies and Fairies. The explosion across the sea to his enchanted island castle. The Brownies build a raft and follow. A terrific storm imperils their safety. Euphrosyne, goddess of mirth, appears in answer to their prayers, with Neptune and his sea chariot. The god of the sea quiets the turbulent waters and the Brownies proceed in safety.

By means of raft and airship they reach the enchanted island and find much to mystify them. The Brownies hide in the outer halls of the castle while the king and some of his followers, disguised as a German street band, gain entrance to Dragonfel's mighty presence. At a favorable moment they make an attack on Dragonfel and are just about to conquer when he calls on Vulcan to bring earthquake and ruin. The castle falls in ruins, the mountain becomes a volcano, and lava is seen pouring down its side to overwhelm and destroy the Brownies. The Brownies are department comes to the rescue. Daylight finds the Brownies still in quest of the queen, and as their power is gone with the rising sun they are easily overcome by Dragonfel's followers, and are made to slave and toil in the mines. Here they remain until the Russian Brownie explodes a dynamite bomb with which the peace of the whole band has been continually threatened. The explosion causes the caving in of a rift in which Dragonfel happens to be, and in the meantime Euphrosyne has come to the rescue of the queen and the Fairies. Florimel and Titanis are united, while the mines gradually disappear and a glorious night view of Brownieland is disclosed.

MANY WOMEN SUFFER FROM LACK OF INFORMATION.

Doctors Are Too Reserved. A Woman Should Be Dealt With Openly.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

Women are often allowed by their physicians to suffer much from lack of information and anxiety.

Many medical and it is a struggle to acknowledge not understand men are vain, gle for them that they do not investigate; they have faith in their doctor, and often wreck their lives through this unfortunate confidence.

In the treatment of female diseases men work from theory; and it is not to be expected that they can treat as intelligently those complaints from which they have never suffered, as a woman can who has made the organism and diseases of her sex a life study.

Women afflicted with female diseases are wise in communicating promptly with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Their distressed condition is due to womb trouble, and their symptoms tell the story.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one remedy that removes the cause, and restores health, courage, and happiness. The druggists sell more of it than all other female medicines. Why?

The following short letter speaks for itself. Mrs. Parker is a very young wife; only twenty-one years old. She was suffering from womb trouble when she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. See the result.

"Can evidence be stronger than this? I deem it my duty to announce the fact to all my fellow-sufferers of all female complaints that your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me of all the pains and suffering I was enduring when I wrote you last May. I followed your advice to the letter, and the result is wonderful."—Mrs. CHAS. PARKER, Little Falls, Minn. Any druggist has it.
